REUNIONS

Rollins faculty, staff, administration and student body, will roll out the "Red Carpet" of welcome to Alumni, when they return to the Campus for three days, April 26, 27 and 28, to celebrate the first formal class reunions and homecoming of Alumni. The date selected is the weekend nearest to April 28 of each year. On this date in 1885 the State of Florida granted a charter to Rollins College. ROLLINS AND THE AAUW

Sidney J. French
Dean of the College.

There is undoubtedly much misunderstanding among the Alumni regarding Rollins and the American Association of University Women. I wish to make the following statement, therefore, in an attempt to clarify the matter.

A brief summary of the situation is that the AAUW has not yet received approval of its policy by the National Commission On Accrediting, of which Rollins is a charter member. If and when such approval is given by the NCA, Rollins will consider negotiations with the AAUW.

The following are the details of the situation:

Rollins is a charter member of the National Commission On Accrediting. This organization is not, itself, an accrediting agency. Rather, it is devoted to the purpose of eliminating "the objectionable practices and policies of accrediting agencies and at the same time preserving their contributions to higher education."

The Commission was organized by a group of college and university presidents in 1949 because "The multiplicity of accrediting agencies and the variability of their criteria were subjecting the institutions to conflicting demands and unnecessary expenditures." All member colleges were asked not to approach any of these special accrediting agencies until the commission had worked out suitable accrediting methods and criteria with them.

In general the Commission sought to have the regional accrediting association assume wider responsibilities for accrediting special as well as general functions of institutions within their regions. For this area the regional accrediting association is the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Rollins has long been a fully accredited member of this Association.

Because Rollins strongly supports the principles for which the Commission stands in the efforts to eliminate the objectionable multiplicity of special agencies, each insisting that the college conform to its special requirements, Rollins will not approach any special accrediting agency until authorized to do so by the National Commission on Accrediting.

It is heartening to know that many conferences between NCA and the AAUW have resulted in progress. Recent informal reports indicate that the NCA may soon be ready to give official approval for member colleges to contact the AAUW. When, and if, such approval is given Rollins stands ready to move in accordance with its obligations to the NCA and the Southern Association.
